Journal of Greek Archaeology Volume 5: Editorial

Volume 5 is perhaps the richest and most diverse volume we have been able to offer you readers. We have kept to our brief to cover all the major periods of Greek Archaeology in a literal sense, with articles from the Neolithic through Greco-Roman times and the Middle Ages and up to the 19th century AD. Geographically we range from Sicily through the Aegean to Turkey.

A major novelty is the inclusion of two Colloquia, one on the economics of Greek Protohistoric to Archaic ‘colonisation’ edited by Lieve Donnellan, the second on Byzantine landscape archaeology edited by Effie Athanassopoulos.

Alongside a wealth of period-based papers on settlements, ceramics, lithics and urban infrastructure, we also give you a major report on the nature and future of surface survey in Mediterranean lands, a group article – the fruit of some twenty years of twice-yearly conferences by the International Mediterranean Survey Workshop community.

Our review section also ranges through prehistory to the recent past, including the historiography of research, where I would highlight an extensive and enlightening (but disturbing) review article by Margriet Haagsma on discrimination against female scholars in early 20th century Classical Archaeology.

We miss this time (once more!) being offered papers on Art and Architecture for all our main periods, please fill this thematic gap, if you have a piece to send us for review, or students working in this field, or hear an excellent lecture, get into contact with me.
